Jesus

My dear apostles, together, we are making advances. Humanity groans with the changes coming upon them and yet, Heaven's servants become holier and holier. The project that is your holiness is on track. Dear apostles, this is the most important thing and this should be your greatest concern. I want you to be aware of your progress. Instead of being distracted by the changes occurring in the world, you actively participate in the changes through your personal commitment to remain connected to my will in each day. You are offering your service through your Allegiance Prayer and I am accepting your service and using you to teach others what true holiness looks like. From the outside, you probably look as though you are working hard. From the outside, it is probably evident that your commitment has cost you something, meaning, your own plan. You have submitted your plan to me and I have handed you my plan in return. Accepting my plan for your life is not easy. Some moments are more difficult than other moments. Yet, you continue. You strive for more total acceptance of my will. This is what I am asking of you and this is what the Father asked of me, abandonment. If you want to learn about abandonment, simply look to my figure on the cross. My Passion offers you a glimpse of where abandonment took me. Your joy in service offers others a glimpse of where abandonment has taken you. Please be joyful. Your joy offers the world hope. Joy is infectious. Hope is infectious. Suffering passes away and what remains is your offering. I am returning. I tell you this because it is true and I want you to be prepared and to help others to be prepared. All is well. The Infant King looks out upon a world which craves him. Bring me to others, that they may also herald my return.
