

We continue our cycle of monthly messages for 2019 with the message from March 1, 2011 for our prayer groups and personal reflection.

March 1, 2011

Jesus

Be at peace, dear apostles. I urge you to strive daily to accept my peace. All that surrounds you will benefit from your understanding that while the world changes, God remains the same. I am the same. I am with you. The reason I urge you toward a peaceful countenance is because the enemy of peace sows fear in God's children. You may think that I am asking you to be at peace but that this is too difficult. Dear friend of my heart, consider for a moment. What diminishes your peace? Who diminishes your peace? Which people? Which habits? Which activities? Ask yourself why these people or habits diminish your peace. You must find the answers in contemplation of me and contemplation of heavenly concepts. Only then will you be able to readily identify the contrast between the feeling of peace that heaven offers and the feeling of agitation that the world offers. The Spirit within you directs you to quiet, even in the midst of what might necessarily be a busy life. If you work from me, you will retain your peace in activity and in interaction with others because you will be giving and receiving me. When you are with someone who is unable to accept my love, my love will surround that person until that person can receive it and you will not have wasted love because my love blesses you even as it moves through you. By working from me, you are disciplining yourself to remain peaceful because I am peace. I am calm. I am love. How often I ask you to provide the world with a contrast and it is in remaining peaceful that you will do so. Be alert to my presence and you will spread peace.

DIRECTION FOR OUR TIMES
Apostolate of the Returning King